Municipal shelters are mandated to accept every animal that comes through their doors. A city's municipal shelter also serves as that area's animal control, run by its government. All shelters in Colorado may euthanize for extreme health concerns and/or poor quality of life, but each work to find a loving home for the vast majority of animals in their care, often transferring animals they can't help to other shelters. Find a list of all Metro Denver Animal Welfare Alliance (MDAWA) member shelters online.
